STATE OF EMERGENCY

Governor Timothy M. Kaine declared a state of emergency for the Commonwealth of Virginia on August 31, 2006, in preparation for Tropical Storm Ernesto.

On 8 September, the Governor requested a presidential disaster declaration for Individual Assistance to include nine localities: the counties of Accomack, Gloucester, Lancaster, Mathews, Middlesex and Northumberland, and the cities of Hampton, Newport News and Richmond and has requested Public Assistance for 25 localities: the counties of Accomack, Caroline, Charles City, Dinwiddie, Essex, Gloucester, Isle of Wight, James City, King William, Lancaster, Mathews, Middlesex, New Kent, Northampton, Northumberland, Richmond, Southampton, Surry, Sussex, Westmoreland and York, and the cities of Hampton, Newport News, Poquoson and Richmond.

Marine Resources Commission developed language for amended Executive Order which, if accepted, would provide for an expedited state permitting for pier and shoreline restoration.

The hurricane is currently churning northward, but is expected to gradually turn more northeastward, passing well to the east of Bermuda and offering no threat to the U.S. Even farther out in the Atlantic, Tropical Depression 8 is traveling westward several hundred miles southwest of the Cape Verde Islands. The depression is forecast to slowly strengthen (becoming Tropical Storm Helene) and is expected to take on a more west-northwesterly track.
